London 09/08/2006

Pupils receive their A-level results next week and those finalising their university places are faced with a scramble to find accommodation before term starts. The UK's No 1 student accommodation website, Accommodation for Students (www.accommodationforstudents.com), can not only help them in their quest it can also ensure they don't pay over the odds. Accommodation for Students (AFS) has just published its latest research into the nationwide cost of rented student accommodation based on 29,000 properties in over 60 university locations across the UK featured on its website. It reveals that the current average weekly rent for a student in the UK is £58.19, an increase of 3.3% over last year's figure of £56.30.

Rents vary dramatically across the UK. London is, by far, the most expensive place to study, at an average weekly rent of £102, a massive 75% above average. Top university towns, Cambridge and Oxford, come next, 38% above average, followed by a host of south-eastern and southern university locations: Guildford, Kent (Canterbury), Bristol, Exeter and Eastbourne (see full league table below). Scottish university cities Glasgow and Edinburgh are also more expensive to live in, both being 15% above average. The traditional English redbrick universities: Birmingham, Manchester, Liverpool, Sheffield, Nottingham, Newcastle and Leeds are all average or below average for student rentals. Best value locations in terms of student rental accommodation are the less fashionable student towns like Middlesbrough, Stoke, Wolverhampton, Bradford and Sunderland with average weekly rents of £38, £39, £41, £43 and £44 respectively). By and large most university locations show an average rent consistent with last year but there are two big movers. The average weekly rent in Durham has shot up from £50 last year, 10% below the UK average, to £63 this year, 8% above average, and Loughborough has risen from £52 last year, 7% below average, to £62 this year, 7% above average.

Simon Thompson, co-founder and director of Accommodation for Students, said:

"Now that students are accumulating large borrowings to subsidise their study, the cost of accommodation has become a critical factor in their choice of university and our UK-wide league table is a valuable tool for both new and existing students in assessing their accommodation options."

Not only does Accommodation for Students offer more rental properties than any other student accommodation website but we also give students excellent added value features on the website. They can advertise for housemates via our notice board facility. Our rental reviews even gives them rental costs by area for each city, as well as the city average. Further, we provide the students' own ratings for each university town in terms of going out, shopping, transport and facilities."

Accommodation for Students is top of the UK search engines and had a record breaking month in July with over 475,000 visitors, and an average site visit time of over 5 minutes.
